HIDE AT DAYTIME, WORK AT NIGHT

FUGITIVE FILIPINAS IN PARIS

About 2,000 Filipinos, more than 90 percent of them women, are now living the life of a fugitive in France. They hide at daytime, and go to work at night to evade immigration authorities.

They don't want to come back to the Philippines now because, in the first place, it is life's hardships here that prompted them to go abroad,

The Filipinos - 40 percent of whom are teachers, nurses, secretaries, stenographers, medical assistants and lawyers - are waiting for the time that the French government would show its understanding and allow them to stay legally.

The plight of the Filipinos was exposed by one of Paris'

U.S.-RP proposed treaty immoral?

Extradition may be defined, under international law, as the surrender by one state to another of an individual convicted or accused of having committed a crime with the jurisdiction of the demanding state, for trial and punishment.

It presupposes the existence of fugitive criminals, or persons accused of having committed crimes in one country and of having fled to another country for safety and protection.

However, it does not generally cover political or religious crimes. Nor, strictly speaking, does it cover such crimes as might have been committed in a state by a foreign national, for which reason he could not be surrendered to his home state until he has fully paid for the said crime in the host coun-

In view of the above definition, it is interesting to know whether the proposed extradition treaty between the United States and the Philippines conforms to the principles.

In other words, what exactly does reciprocity mean in the context of Filipino-American relations as far as the extradition treaty is concerned?

There is an overt suggestion that the U.S. is willing to exchange American servicemen arrested in the Philippines for various crimes and misdemeanors in favor of Filipinos wanted in the home country and now residing in the States.

It appears that what the Americans want in this case is that their servicemen who are detained and facing trial in Philippine courts should be deported back to the states, without conviction, in exchange for Filipino citizens who had fled to the U.S. in fear of being arrested here.

One can glean that the arrangement is a mockery of international law, and is not exactly an extradition treaty as fully understood by lawyers and political scientists. Even a layman, not versed in the intricacies of the law, would know that the aforesaid agreement is unjust if not uncalled for.

In fact, what is more illogical and stupid than exchanging a prisoner already facing trial before the courts with a man suspected of a crime but presumed to be innocent, who had sought refuge in a foreign country?

The Philippines would in the end find itself at the losing part. For, indeed, it is a fact that dozens of American servicemen outside their bases have been apprehended by Philippine authorities for various offenses, ranging from drug addiction and gunrunning to rape, for which they should be made to serve sentence in the Philippines.

Whereas, there are Filipino civilians who have not even committed a light offense in the United States where they have possibly turned into a new leaf, and face deportation back to the Philippines to face trial-perhaps, for an imaginary crime concocted by his enemies.

As it appears, what the papers are probably hinting at is that the Filipinos and Americans are about to enter into a convict-swapping deal involving American servicemen and wanted Filipinos abroad. This deal is similar to the one being proposed between the United States and Thailand, which is described by the Agence France

> "The United States will press for a proposed U.S .-Thai convict exchange treaty during Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanda's visit to Washington next week, the U.S. embassy confirmed yesterday. A spokesman said the U.S. beieved that allowing prisoners to serve out sentence in their homeland improved rehabilitation chances, and was more humane because their families would be closer. Earlier this month 56 out of the 450 foreigners in Thai jails almost all of them held on drug charges went on a hunger strike to back demands for better conditions, pending any re-patriation agreement."

The proposed extradition treaty between the U.S. and the Philippines would be unconscionable if not downright immoral. It would be to the advantage of the Filipino people if they reject it and seek one that is honorable, righteous, and consonant with the observance of human rights, and patriotism.

Japanese attacked off Luzon

The 19-ton No. 21 Okura Maru from Naha, carrying a crew of eight, was returning to Naha from tuna fishing in the South China Sea when several men with knives and harpoons from an unidentified ship attack the Japanese boat, 70 miles northwest of San Fernando on the west coast of Luzon island, the report said.

The pirates forced the crew of the fishing boat to the bow, searched the ship for about two hours and then fled to the east with the refrigerator and other articles, it said.

The number of the pirates and their nationality were not confirmed at the time, it added.

In his memorandum, Diokno recalled that he had named the Supreme Court Chief Justice and the Minister of Justice as co-chairmen of the Presidential Committee on Judicial Reorganization that formulated the plan on the reorganization of the Judiciary. Three other Justices

- Aquino, Melencio-Herrera and Antonio (now retired) - were named members of the Commit-

Diokno termed as unfortunate the acceptance by the Justices of their appointments to the Committee, he said:

"The public announcement that the Honorable Chief Justice, although head of an equal and coordinate branch of the government, had accepted co-chairmanship of a Presdential Committee that submitted a report to the President could not but generate the mistaken belief that the Judiciary is subordinate to the Executive."

Diokno said that "however well-intentioned these actuations may have been . . . the practice of advising the President, whether officially or privately, patently violates the constitutional mandate for the separation of powers and impairs public confidence in the independence and impartiality of the Judiciary."

The second reason advanced by Diokno on the genetic unconstitutionality of the Act is based on a series of events that he said, assaulted the independence of the Judiciary. These events, according to him, were:

1. Immediately after the declaration of martial law, the regime demanded letters of resignation from members of the Judiciary, except the Justices of the Supreme Court. This was the first direct assault on the security and tenure and consequently on the independence of the Judiciary

2. The second assault was on Jan. 17, 1973, when in violation of the 1935 Constitution . , the regime proclaimed that the 1973 Constitution had been ratified. That Constitution contained a transitory provision that incumbent members of the Judiciary could continue in office "until otherwise decreed by the incumbent President," This second assault was reinforced when the then members of the Supreme Court took an oath of office under the 1973 Constitution.

3. A third reason was martial law itself. It created a climate of fear from which members of the bench and the bar were not exempted.

4. Still another factor is the creation of military commissions to which jurisdiction over many cases were transferred from the Court of First Instance.

Prisoners of conscience week held throughout the world

LONDON (AFP) - Amnesty International has held a week-long drive to highlight the cases of more than 4,000 prisoners of conscience it is tyring to free from detention throughout the world.

In a new report issued for its annual "Prisoners of Conscience Week", the Interna-tional Human Rights Organization said nearly half the 154 member states of the United Nations were believed to be holding such prisoners people imprisoned anywhere for their beliefs or origin who have not used or advocated violence.

The report stresses that the prisoners of conscience Amnesty International knows of are only a fraction of those probably held throughout the world. For every name that is known, it says, there are many others that are unknown, "amounting to an unacknowledged population of prisoners of conscience scattered over the globe, in overcrowded prisons, in labor camps, on isolated islands.

The 40-page report, Prisoners of Conscience, says that few governments admit openly that they are holding their own citizens in violation of internationally recognized standards. But, says Amnesty International, the prisoners of conscience whose cases it has taken up are being detained in contravention of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other U.N. standards.

It points out that some governments try to reinterpret these standards as they continue to jail non-conformists. For example, some claim that freedom of expression does not include the rigth to advocate Communism, while others forbid agitation against Communism. Others assert that they do not send people to prison for their beliefs, although their legislation makes the expression of dissenting ideas a criminal offense.

Amnesty International's volunteer members in groups around the world will be holding public meetings, vigils and religious services and sending delegations to embassies to press for the release of 16 prisoners whose cases have been selected to symbolize the face of thousands of others.

The 16 include a Czechoslovak human rights activist now serving a five-year prison terni; a Uruguayan trade union leader sentenced by a military tribunal to eight years' imprisonment; four young men detained in an internment camp for more than four years without charge or trial in Cameroun; the former Roman Catholic bishop of Shanghai, held since 1955 and now in his

Are women for beating?

By JACQUES HASDAY

BRASILIA (AFP) -Consuelo Badra, social columnist on a leading newspaper here, is a living corroboration of the old Brazilian adage, "Mulhere e para apanhar", which may be loosely translated as "Women are meant for beating."

For after savage chastisement at the hands of an erstwhile gentleman friend, Miss Badra is spoiling for a fight - a fight to defend millions of her countrywomen from husbands and lovers who beat them regularly as a matter of course.

Striking the first blow in that fight, she called a press conference here, exhibited her injuries notably a black eye and welts - and told her story.

The story was subsequently carried by newspapers throughout the nation, and it has remobilized feminist movements and congresswomen militating for years to make wife-beating an indictable offense.

Miss Badra alleged that her former flame, Antonio Venancio, Jr., son of a prominent construction tycoon in the capital, abducted her, thrashed her, stripped her naked, put her in handcuffs, then took photographs.

He did this, she claimed, partly because she has rebuffed his advances and partly because she wrote an article hostile to the powerful Brazilian Coffee Institute (BCI)

She added that despite threats she was pressing assaults charges against her persecutor.

The Badra case was raised in Parliament here by Congresswoman Lucia Viveiros, who represents the northern constituency of Para. She denounced the "centuries-old prejudice in Brazilian life which has lately assumed the form of sadism and cruelty."

She was far from understating the case, for in Rio de Janerio, Belo Horizonte, and other Brazilian cities there have been repeated instances in recent months of women being killed by their infuriated males.

Following a series of such deaths in Belo Horizonte, indignant women in the city formed a protection league and organized a phone counselling service for beaten wives. Their watchword, daubed on walls everywhere, was: "Se se ama nao se mata" -When you love you do not

And in Sao Paulo last spring, hundreds of women demonstrated at a requiem mass for Eliane de Grammoni, shot to death by her jealous husband, the singer Lindomar Castillo, after they had separated.

In Brazil, however, the law takes a lenient view of wife-killing and conjugal mayhem in general. When prosecutions are brought, the offending male is entitled to plead "justified defense of honor", an archaic plea that legalizes violent vengeance by a husband if his wife has been unfaithful.

Where are the cops?

The action photo above was taken by an alert photographer of the Philippine News Agency at Liwasang Bonifacio (formerly Plaza Lawton), very close to the Bureau of Posts building. The woman and her companion (in white T-shirt) try to ward off an unidentified bag snatcher, shown in the background. The snatcher succeeded in running away with the woman's purse after stabbing her in the upper right arm (note gaping wound).

This is not the first crime against property in the area. Every now and then, women lose their purse, watches and valuables to holduppers and bag snatchers. Men who walk across Liwasang are no exceptions. They, too, often lose their watches, wallets - and pride.

Crime flourishes in the area because it is dark at night. And because there are no policemen.

Of course, cops abound in the area at daytime. They usually are seen at places where buses going to the South wait for passengers.

We refuse to believe that the incidence of crime at the liwasan has not reached the attention of police authorities. To entertain such an idea is just too naive.

Warring fraternity leaders in Metro Manila have decided to bury the hatchet-but not on each other's

The leaders of at least three major Greek-lettered student organizations, obviously stung by the public outery against fratentity rumbles in campuses, have, in fact, banded themselves together to restore the lost prestige of their respective organiza-

I was informed by Mike Molino, spokesman of the recently-organized Inter-Fraternity Solidarity, that his colleagues are dead serious in keeping the peace. Not only that. The Solidarity members are thinking of undertaking projects to prevent violence among frat members. They are also offering their services and talents to promote community-action jects.

The Solidarity was scheduled to hold a press conference last October 18 at the Vinzon's Hall, University of the Philippines, Diliman. The conference was supposed to have formally launched the coming to terms of such frats as the Alpha Phi Omega, Beta Sigma and Tau Gamma

Peace looms in campuses

By JOSE G. BURGOS, JR.

Unfortunately, it was a Sunday and I could not make it. Nevertheless, Mike furnished me a letter which spells out Solidarity's rationale:

"We have oftentimes been the subject of real or imagined accusations. One noted Dean, for example, has accused our fraternity brothers in the University Belt as 'educated gangsters'. We have often been accused of being vandals; we have been unjustly accused of being no practical use or service to the academic community.

"We are fraternity members. We believe and love the fraternity system. We offer no excuses for what might have happened in the past. We are in the middle of an unresponsive system where we are denied in general of any viable opportunity make our activities relevant and meaningful to the students and the people.

"In the light of these developments, a new aggrupation came into being, the Inter-Fraternity Solidarity (IFS).

"The IFS is the first major attempt in giving a tangible solution to the problem of non-antagonistic contradictions which existed in the past."

Since last year I have been involved in searching for a way in which rival fraternities could join hands for their members' welfare. In fact, if I remember right. I have met some of the frat leaders in my office and was even willing to host a discussion round-table among frat leaders. That is why I am happy to know about the organization of Solidarity. I hope this is not a ningas cogon thing.

Mabuti't mayroon ka ngayong seksiyong "Humanities," na magsisilbi na ring pitak-pangkultura. Sayang at dahil sa kakulangan ng badyet ay hindi mo yata magawang maglathala ng mga orihinal na akdang mapanuri at mapanlikha tungkol sa sining, kasaysayan at pilosopiya, na siyang pangunahing saklaw ng humanities.

The nameless and the faceless

By JOAQUIN R. ROCES

Two hundred workers drowned in Davao But they were all nameless and faceless And for the nameless and the faceless This Society could not care less

They can be robbed each night and day
Hit on the road by some fool driver
Who does not care to stop, just runs away
Shot deliberately or by mistake
Then called a rustler, or even NPA
Crowded into an inter-island ship like cattle
And then drowned at sea in a storm
The nameless and the faceless

A man has to have a name
Even if he lives in shame
In order to get official attention
A man has to have the kind of face
That is given newspaper space
To attract concern in his direction
The setting up of government for the few
Has reached the stage of perfection.

Bulok na sistema

Ako'y nagitla kay Ginoong Ferdinand E. Marcos ng kan-yang sabihin na ipagtatanggol ang kapakanan ng "Third World Countries" sa pama-magitan ng pagpapaliwanag ng karaingan nito sa gaganaping pulong sa Cancun, Mexico, Oct. 22-23, 1981, (Philippines Daily Express, Oct. 15, 1981) at patuloy niya na ang pananaw ng 22 pinuno ng mga bansa ay itutuon sa paksaing food, energy, monitary problems at trade.

Bilang isa sa Third World Countries, and Pilipinas ay malalagay sa maselang katayuan. Alam sa daigdig ang situasiyon sa atin.

Ng mahalal na pangulo si Marcos ng taon 1965, ang pandaigdig na utang natin ay $800 milyon lamang, Ngayon, mahigit na $15 bilyon ang ating pandaigdig na utang.

Imposibleng makabayad, ngunit tuloy pa rin ang pangungutang upang ibaon ng husto ang bayan.

Ang corruption ay talamak di mapapantayan sa alin mang panig ng daigdig.

Tuliro na ang mamamayan sa taas ng halaga ng bilihin.

Maraming nagugutom at diskontento ang mamamayan sanhi ng mga patayan atmalawakang paglalaban.

Ang pananaw ay madilim, walang pagasa sa kinabukasan.

Ang kasalukuyang sistema ay bulok, dapat lamang ibalik ang konstitusiyon 1935.

IBP comment is ill-timed

By RAUL M. GONZALES

A Municipal Mayor in Iloilo told me about the anomalous construction of an 18-room school house in the town of Alimodian, Iloilo, being undertaken by a construction firm known as Milestone Enterprises. According to my informant, this firm has been complaining because a school official in this municipality has reportedly been demanding for kickbacks which has already run to six figures. Maybe the Tanodbayan should do well to look into this report.

Is it true that the wife of a military official assigned West Visayas can afford to lose P5,000 a night in a gambling casino? I cannot conform this because I have not witnessed this lady do her thing, but my informant is another Iloilo town mayor who seems to know a lot.

Imagine a leader of a crime syndicate was able to escape the 4th time while under PC custody? There can be no question that the PC authorities in Camp Crame responsible in the custody of this notorious outlaw were either very lax in performing their duties or they were in connivance with the escapee. Clearly, we have a crime of infidelity in the custody of prisoner committed by the military people. The question is: Can they be charged before the Sandiganbayan, where the offense rightfully belongs?

I am really amazed that notorious criminals can be guarded so loosely to enable them to escape, but when political detainees are concerned, the military are always so strict even on the matter of having them visited by their families or their lawyers. And to think that many of the political prisoners - kept in solitary cells, many tortured, guarded even with barbed wires around their quarters - are not even formally charged with any offense at all! No wonder we so much to explain in our observance of human

Reverie at Cancun

By ARMANDO J. MALAY

Being a faithful husband, President Marcos spent his nights at Cancun alone in his hotel room. Often he could not sleep, thinking of the loving spouse he had left behind. The first night, he took three baths before going to bed; still, sleep wouldn't come. Not being a drinking man, he left alone the bottle of tequila beside the bed. The TV was no help. He couldn't make much of what the commentators were saying, as he took only six units of Spanish in the U.P.

Finally the lonely man decided to hum to himself all the songs he used to sing with fellow Upsilonians (Katoks, Bobbie, Corban, etc.) He remembered the names of the songs (I'm in the Mood for love, I'll Never Smile Again, How Deep is the Ocean, Lover Come Back to Me, You'll Never Know, Queja Pampera, Stardust, Oh How I Miss, You're my Sunshine, Till We Meet Again), but he couldn't remember all the words except Ramona.

He begun to sing but for some reason, instead of saying Ramona, he substituted Ronald-o, the Hispanized name of the US president who gave him a wide smile at the meeting that morning. His song went this way:

Ronald-o, I hear the cancun bells above,
Ronald-o, today has been a day of love,
I need you, I need you,
Our loans are now overdue,
Remember, remember,
we swim or sink together...
Ronald-o, our hearts beat as one,
Ronald-o, we're in the same can-can,

same can-can,
So, dear heart, make things easy for me,
Ronald-o, please remember me.

He was so pleased with his improvisation that at last he was able to sleep.

Kokoy joke of the Week:

Joe: "Wow, what's he studying?"

Pocholo: "He isn't studying. They're studying him."

Our external and internal debts are — eternal.

Some "cronies" are helping the government by holding it up.

Speaking of this government, when all is said and done, more is said than done.

Who is the ranking Metro-Manila Fiscal, reported to be involved in the fake land titles cases who reportedly threatened members of the JUCRA (Justice Reporters Association) with libel charges if his name is mentioned in their news stories? I was told by a very reliable source in the office of this Fiscal that a top lawyer was already approached by this mysterious personality to handle his case against reporters and newspapers the moment his name gets mentioned. Perhaps this is the reason why nothing has been mentioned about this Metro-Manila Fiscal anymore in the press.

The recent announcement from the Integrated Bar about the stand of the Board of Governors upholding the Constitutionality of the Judiciary reorganization Law is ill-timed, perhaps even contumacious considering that the case is sub-judice before the Supreme Court. Imagine supposed leaders of the Bar cannot even think that the case is still pending and any comment, for or against the law, would be uncalled for and inappropriate, to say the least? What is the distinguished IBP Board of Governors so in a hurry about?

Views & Interviews

Of death and taxes

By PROF. SALVADOR ROXAS GONZALES

Interview with Salvador Roxas Gonzalez by a gravedigger regarding All Saints Day.

Q. I've come for the repainting of your mother's tomb, Professor. All Saint's Day is fast approaching. Would you like it repainted?

Yes, I am glad you came. I have been looking for you for some days now.

You knew, it is my sideline, painting tombs when I am not digging graves. I am also part-time funeral parlor attendant, you see I took a course in advanced embalming in one of the universities. Would you believe it?

A. Why, yes. The Ministry of Education and Culture sees to it that universities teach relevant subjects, and considering that there are many people being killed now because of holdups, I can see that your occupation is rather relevant.

Q. I also design coffins, Professor, all kinds - including air-conditioned ones. None of my customers complain. If the coffin is bought from my store, the burial is free. I even offer three coffins for the price of two, to help the families of those who die in mass accidents. What do you say?

I see, you are all around. How about the flowers?

Those are a little expensive during All Saints Day, so I have cheap artificial flowers for rent.. After the burial, I take them again. Why do you frown, Professor?

I like to believe that we should place fresh natural flowers on the tombs of the dead, especially when they are our dear ones.

What for? The dead don't come out to smell the flowers anyway.

Yes, but it is our Christian tradition, to put flowers on the tomb of the dead,

It is also the Chinese tradition, I was told, to put food on the tombs of their dead. But do their dead rise to eat the food, Professor? Perhaps you've got a point there, particularly when the price of flowers sky-rockets come All Saints Day. Nonetheless, I place roses on the tomb of my mother, she liked roses, this I remember since childhood, for she died when I was quite young. If only I could have mother back.

Oh, you will meet your mother again in the next life, Professor. Are you afraid to die?

No, I was a combat soldier in the last War. Besides, it's God's will and not ours when we'll die. Look at President Marcos, he is still alive.

- Q. You're right, Professor. There is no such thing as an untimely death, all deaths are timely. But why are many people afraid to die?
- A. Because of their guilty conscience. They know they'll have to pay for all the crimes and injustices they have committed on earth, God wouldn't care less whether they were once presidents or dictators. The rumour is that it's quite hot in Hell.
- But you know, Professor, many people today cannot afford even to die. The cost of dying has risen. What, with all those additional taxes on coffins and funeral services and gasoline to take the dead to the emetery,, the poor can't afford to die. Don't you think so?
- A. Well, with the added luxury tax, and coffins are a luxury, what can one expect?
- Holy cadaver! I am glad that the government doesn't charge the dead for travel tax, Professor, they can't afford it, particularly if they are poor. Why do you think Mr. Virata likes to increase the

Two 'terrorists' meet

I was now satisfied that the conversation was centering on the main issue. Imelda appeared to be listening with interest. She made no sign of wanting to comment as I paused for a second, so I continued.

"If you reach the conclusion, which many of us know to be correct, that indeed the events during the past year or so are the first signs of a revolution, then there is only one possible time and only one way to stop it."

"How can we stop it?" Imelda asked, without arguing against its existence.

"Firstly, by acting soon, before it becomes irreversible and secondly, by looking at the true facts and giving the people what they want so desperately that they are ready to kill and ready to die for it."

"Your impression of what is happening in the Philippines may not be accurate. I travel all over the country, and I can feel the pulse of the people. They are happy, and their standard of living is steadily improving. The farmers have their own land; their homes have electricity; we are producing enough rice so we can now export; we have peace and order. I cannot believe that my people are as unhappy as you make them appear.'

"It is quite possible that you want to see the truth but cannot. That's what happens when repressive regimes are feared by their people. You know, those who are organizing your trips around the country have to make sure you are impressed with the reception you receive. If you're not, they're out of a job. It is not really difficult to gather several thousand people to greet you and cheer you when you visit some barrio. This can create the very impression you ascribe to me. On the other hand, it is difficult to dismiss the events on April 6, 1978 as an orchestrated affair. How can you possibly believe that you are popular and loved by the great majority of your people-or that your oppo-

Imelda seemed stunned. She was listening attentively and obviously had not expected an abrupt and specific question. After a hesitation, Imelda managed to say, "It could have been the fever of the campaign. You know how the Filipinos are about elec-"Why then should they scream against you instead of for you?" I insisted.

"Well, Manilans have always been for the opposition," she responded.

"If that is the case, why did the results show such a resounding defeat of all twenty-one opposition candidates? Are you admitting that the election was rigged?"

"Well," she answered lamely, "Manilans are traditionally with the opposition, but they are not always the majority."

I overlooked her contradictory answers. I was not trying to humiliate her. I was only trying to help her see what her supporters were trying to prevent her from seeing. I simply said. "Perhaps you will at least agree with me that the 'disgruntled elements' are not just few, but quite a few-in Manila anyway." I did not wait for a comment. She seemed to be listening with interest.

"Mrs. Marcos, you are an intelligent woman. Your husband is thought to be a brilliant man. One need not be intelligent or brilliant to see the obvious, if one wants to see it. When you ask your-

Do you think that the government cares about the dead?

I don't know, it seems not to care even about the living the way the citizens are taxed nowadays so that the government of Mr. Marcos will have all it

I think that many are turning in their graves on the way this country is run by the government. The problems of the Philippines are grave.

self why Presy and Steve oppose you, you may want to deceive yourself with the answer: 'because I hurt their family; I imprisoned their brother; I took their money. When you ask why Ninoy, Manglapus, Tanada, Salonga, Diokno, Rodrigo, Macapagal and other politicians oppose you, you may want to deceive yourself with the answer: 'because they are envious and just want to take my place.' Your answers may be right in some of these cases, because, with such people, there is certainly the possibility of a selfish motive. But, Mrs. Marcos, if you really want to find out whether the recent events in Manila are the first clear signs of revolution or the activities of a 'few disgruntled elements,' please consider this question: why would a bright, welleducated man, a man who has no reason or motive to have anything against you personally; a man who has no political ambition; a man who is a staunch anti-communist; a man who is a devout Christian from a family of priests and nuns; a man like Eddie Olaguer; why would he oppose you? Why would a man like Olaguer tell you 'I have taken arms against you because you've hurt my people enough.' You find the answer to this question, and I am sure you will find out whether you are looking at the first signs of a real revollution."

"I really appreciate your views, Steve, although I can't say that I agree with everything you are saying. You have a clear way of making your point. I wish you could have a good talk with the President. It might be very useful. Maybe you could meet somewhere in Hong Kong or somewhere," she talking to me.

for one second who she was. "Mrs. Marcos, first you must understand that dictatorial regimes like yours can be destabilized and overthrown. It happens all the time. During the past four years alone, thirteen or fourteen dictatorships, quite similar to the martial law regime in the Philippines, have collapsed for one reason you view the martial law regime as stable as the support you now enjoy from the military. corrutpion. "The controversy? Yes, it's true! But I have a sensitivity to power," she is saying slowly. "Power is a funny thing. It seems to elude those who are obsessed with it. And it comes unannounced to those who do not seek it. People ask, in wonder, how come I have a finger in every pie? I am the governor of Manila, yes. I am on the cabinet, minister of Human Settlements, yes. Well, during the last election, the president went out twice."

Mrs. Marcos, 52, knows how to handle the affairs of state. A former beauty queen, today she is a striking vision in a purple shirtdress with an innocent school girl Peter Pan collar of white lace. She looks chic, beautiful. Talking about power, hers seems disconnected from her beauty.

Is it power by association? My question draws a faint scoff. "The first lady?" she asks, suddenly changing pronouns, her churning thoughts leaving her breathless. "Well, she was in the thick of it. She campaigned. She met with the people, with the mother whose child needed hospitalization, with the mother whose child needed schooling."

She switches pronouns, "I went out to the rural areas. Yes, It was I who saw people. I have no offices, I met with whispered, as if she were a million people last year. My thinking aloud rather than role as first lady? It's that of a star and a slave. I set high I felt that I was getting standards. I refuse to relinthrough to her. VIEWPOINTS ... From p. 6 that the IBP President Emeritus, Justice JBL Reyes, spoke very strongly against the law during that meeting of the IBP Governors but nothing of JBL's comments were mentioned whatsoever in the news release of the IBP. I was also informed that the President of the Pangasinan chapter, Atty. Regino also spoke against the law.

By the way, I heard that President Regino was because, complaining when he rose to speak, Acting President Roco asked who he was. Which means that my tocayo Raul Roco has no rapport whatsoever with the IBP rank and file. He cannot even recognize the president of such a big chapter as Pangasinan. But then it is understandable. Afterall, Roco was only imposed upon the Integrated Bar; he never sweated it out to get the lofty position he now holds like many of us. He has not even won a directorship of any chapter yet, before he jumped to become EVP.

One more thing: That

stand of the IBP Board of Governors was made arbitrarily because the chapters were never consulted and it is now being made to appear that that is the official position of the entire Bar in this country. Nowhere in Article VI of the By-Laws can we find any provision giving the Board the power to announce an official stand for the entire Bar on an issue of such magnitude.

Former QC Fiscal Ben Grecia has an interesting story about an incumbent Assistant Fiscal in Quezon City who is facing a murder charge in Marinduque. According to Ben, this Fiscal, because of his closeness to a high official in government, was indicted only in Marinduque, not in the Sandiganbayan as should be the case. Indeed, if this news is true, it is an example of compartmentalized justice under the "New Republic."

An interesting reading nowadays is the series of letters involving a justice in the Court of Appeals which have been making the rounds. The stories in letters are sizzling and we shall talk about these let-ters next time when we have more space.

1. Plaintiff CITIBANK, N.A., is a foreign banking corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the United States of America, duly licensed to do business in the Philippines, with offices at Citibank Center, Paseo de Roxas, Makati, Metro Manila, where it may be served with summons and other court processes. Plaintiff INTER-NATIONAL TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPHIC (PHILS.), INC., is a corporation duly organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the Republic of the Philippines with offices at 2303 Pasong Tamo Extension, Makati, Metro Manila, where it may be served with summons and other court pro-

2. Defendant LOURDES S. CRUZ (herein referred to as CRUZ) is of legal age, Filipino, and with last known address at 2237 Aurora Boulevard, Pasay City, Metro Manila, where she may be served with summons and other court processes. Defendant JOHN DOE and PETER DOE are persons whose personal identity is still unkown and may have conspired and connived with the aforesaid defendant CRUZ in the encashment of the Citibank checks subject of this case

3. Plaintiff INTERNATIONAL TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPHIC (PHILS.) INC., as drawer of the checks subject of this case maintains a current account with its co-plaintiff under Account No. 00593885.

4. On different dates, defendant CRUZ encashed and received the proceeds of several Citibank checks purportedly drawn and issued to her by INTERNATIONAL TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPHIC (PHILS.) INC. against the latter's current account with the plaintiff which checks are more specifically identified as follows:

a) Citibank Check No. 502940 dated December 22, 1980 in the amount of P75,000.00, copy of said check is hereto attached and made an integral part hereof as Annex "A";

c) Citibank Check No. 502942 dated January 27, 1981 in the amount of P40,500.00, copy of said check is still missing and cannot be located.

5. When the aforesaid Citibank checks were presented for encashment, clearing and collection, plaintiff believing that the signature of the drawer appearing thereon is genuine, paid to the payee defendant CRUZ/collecting bank the face amount of said checks.

6. Subsequently thereafter, plaintiff was advised by the drawer of the aforementioned checks that the signature appearing thereon was forged and that the drawer did not issue nor negotiate the said checks to the defendant.

7. Defendant CRUZ committed fraud in encashing the checks subject of this case by making it appear that the signature of the drawer in said checks is genuine and were issued to her by the drawer thereof to plaintiff's prejudice, damages and loss in the total sum of P245,500.00.

8. Citibank is suing as co-plaintiff for it stands ultimately liable for any amount sought to be recovered having been misled to believe in good faith that the signature of the drawer appearing in the aforesaid checks is genuine and was negotiated by INTERNATIONAL TELEPHONE AND TELE-GRAPHIC (PHILS.), INC. to defendant.

9 In view of the urgency of the foregoing circumstances, demands cannot be effectively made and served to defendant

However, defendant CRUZ have sufficient assets in the Philippines in the form of leviable properties, real or personal, which properties if not timely attached, may be disposed of by said defendant CRUZ and would render ineffectual the reliefs prayed for by plaintiff in this Complaint.

11. Plaintiffs are willing to put up a good and sufficient bond for the issuance of a Preliminary Attachment, copy of the bond is hereto attached and made an integral part hereof as Annex "D"

WHEREFORE, it is most respectfully prayed that judgment

Prospects after martial law

The American AID Mision has been in the Philippines since the late 1940s and as operated under a sucession of Philippine adminisrations. In Fiscal Year 1981 the United States will provide $38.5 million in deveopment aid in the form of oans and grants (in addition By CARL H. LANDE

AID staff members think highly of the Marcos Administration's rural infrastructure development programs which, in line with the American congressional mandate and with current developmental thinking, place a special emphasis on improving the earning capacity of the rural poor. While the Americans would have preferred to see a m ore thoroughgoing program of land reform, they recognize that it goes considerably further than previous efforts. The fact is that while they are privately appalled by the venality of the Marcos Administration, American and other foreign economists are

"They also send out profits and repatriate capital enormously exceeding their investment, use such capital to buy out or displace local firms and overprice imports and underprice exports tence of the nation-state, a through transfer pricing thereby draining our foreign reserves."

Dr. Henares cited an NEC report on 108 American firms in the Philippines which showed that from 1956-1965, only 12 percent of the $58.6 direct investments as against system. the 88 percent or $431.1 million which they borrowed from local sources.

Kuro-kuro

Tumbalik patakaran -

Ni FRANCISCO "SOC" RODRIGO

Ang "successor" o tagahalili sa pinuno ng bansa ay dapat ihanda sa paghawak ng poder ano mang oras mamatay o maging inkapasitado ang hepe.

Iya'y patakarang sinusunod ng mga bansa sa mundo, Inihahanda at sinasanay ang "successor" sa pagtupad sa mga tungkuling maaaring bumagsak na bigla sa kanyang mga kamay. Inihahanda rin ang isip ng bayan sa pagtanggap at pagkilala sa nasabing "successor", sakaling may mangyari sa pinuno.

Sa ganyan paraan, nagiging mahusay at matiwasay ang paglilipat ng poder.

Pero, nakalulungkot! Sa Pilipinas ay walang ginagawang ganyang paghahanda.

Segun sa 1981 Amendments, ang "successor" sa presidente ay ang Executive Committee, Sa ngayon, binubuo ito ng 7 myembro. Ang chairman ay si Prime Minister Virata.

Ang pagpunta ni Pres. Marcos sa Cancun, Mexico ay isa sanang oportunidad upang bigyan ng training ang Executive Committee sa pagpapalakad ng bansa, Dapat sanang ito ang ginawang caretaker habang wala sa Pilipinas ang presidente.

Sa ganyang paraan, makikita ang mga depekto ng nasabing Committee . . . at malalapatan ng lunas.

Pero, hindi ganyan ang ginawa ni Pres. Marcos. Hindi ang Executive Committee ang pinagkatiwalaan ng poder. Ni hindi ang chairman nito, Prime Minister Virata, Ang ginawang caretaker ay si Minister Rono na vice-chairman lang.

Paanong mahahanda ang Executive Committee sa pagtupad sa napakabigat na tungkulin nito, sakaling biglang mamatay ang presidente?

Kung baga sa basketball team, ang 7 mga myembro niyan ay ni hindi man lang pinahawak ng bola ay binigyan ng kaunting practice bago iharap sa napakabigat na liga.

Hindi sana bale kung championship lang sa basketball ang nakataya. Ngunit, hindi. Ang nakataya ay ang kapalaran ng buong bansa!

Hindi ko maintindihan kung anong klaseng patakaran ang sinusunod ni G. Marcos.

Tumbalik ang patakaran ng gobyerno sa Land Re-

Habang kinukuha ang mga lupang palayan at maisan ng kahit maliliit na landowners upang ipamudmod sa mga kasama, sinasamsam naman ang maraming mga maliliit na bukirin upang ibigay sa malalaking mga korporasyon,

Libo-libong ektarea ang mga lupaing napapasa-kamay ng mga mayayamang korporasyon, sa ngalan ng tinatawag na "corporate farming"

At, lalong malawak ang mga lupaing napupunta sa kamay ng mga transnational corporations at mga galamay nito, upang gawing banana at pineapple planta-

Ang lupa ay nanggagaling sa mga maliliiit na magsasakang halos pinipilit magbili ng kanilang lupa . . . o basta't itinataboy na lang sa lupang sinasaka.

May ganitong kasong nangyayari ngayon sa Davao Penal Colony (DAPECOL) sa Davao del Norte, Segun sa Federation of Free Farmers (FFF), may isang dambuhalang banana corporation na bumubuwis sa 6,000 ektarea, humigit kumulang, ng Davao Penal Colony (DAPECOL).

Ang 900 ektarea, humigit kumulang, ng nasabing Iupain ay okupado ng maliliit na mga settlers na pawang nagtatanim ng "food crops".

Ngayon daw ay pilit na pinaaalis ang mga settlers na iyan. At may isa na raw tenant-tiller na pinatay, Nakalilito ang mga hakbang ng gobyernong ito, Pakaliwa-pakanan; paatras-paabante!

Sa isang dako, pinaghahati-hati ang lupa na kahit maliliit na landowners; sa kabilang dako, sinasamsam

Land reform hit

The government's line that land reform has emancipated the peasants from their bondage of the soil has met heated oposition from farmer's representatives during a clash of ideas at the University of the Philippines month. last week.

The occasion was a symposium at the UP College of Arts and Sciences theater. Theme of the symposium was "Filipino Peasant Today."

Opposing views were from Agrarian Reform Minister Conrado P. Estrella, on the side of the government, and Central Luzon farmers, on other side.

Naturally, Estrella pictured the land reform programs as successful - something of a gift that Filipino farmers had never known before. But the farmers' representatives have something else to say. For instance:

• The farmer's spokeswoman, Jean Laguerder of the Sandigan para sa Sambayanan, said that the government's land reform program was not sincere in its driveto emancipate peasants from exploitation and oppression of land owners. She accused the government of gearing its land reform program towards the maximization of profits for the multinationalsgovernment partnership.

• Two other farmers, Liberate Turla and Peter Lapuz, criticized P.D. 27, the Land Reform Law, citing that they were heavily indebted because of imported fertilizer, costing P125 per sack and P380 for rent of their plowing machines.

Benjamin Dimao, another farmer, cited military atrocities in Pampanga and complained that a relative of his had been missing since last Estrella assured Dimao that he would elevate his case to Minister Enrile and that the farmers' problems would reach the President.

Estrella, however, maintained that the land reform program had benefited six million individuals because.

according to him, "we do not only distribute land and secure the tenure of farmers but provide them with a package of services to firm up their productivity and income."

He also said that the program had irrigated 1.3 million hectares of land.

Croissance learned that more than 90 percent of the Filipinos are women because the jobs promised them were essentially for women. Of the women at the time Croissance's issue came off the press, only two percent was married.

"Here, we suffer the separation from our families,", Croissance quoted one of the Filipinos. "We have suffered much since leaving the Philippines," groaned one.

While the Filipinos don't want to come back to the Philippines now, they don't want to become French citizens either. That's the reason they have not sent for their families to follow them. Besides, that would be difficult to do because of their situation.

Croissance calls the Filipinos there "The Paperless,"

One difficulty of "The Paperless" is language barrier. "We should learn French." said one, "but we lack the time," (Next issue: "The Paperless" unity and struggle to become legally employed.)

The aspirations of the blind and other handicapped can perhaps be summed up by a statement from the Lingap's position paper which states partly: "The personal dignity and worth of man is not proportional to his limitations, but is enhanced by his ability and capability, inspite of his disability."

Brave words these. And equal to the tasks are the blind themselves who have been persistently working towards their betterment and their future amid the prevailing attitude of the public that they the sightlesshave to be pitted.
